Vintage Notes

The 2022 growing season was very unique. Following a long, wet winter bud break was met with a frost event that set the growing season back by about month. Once the weather turned warm and the vines were able to recover the season stayed consistently hot and dry until mid-October. It was thanks to this favorable weather that the vines were able to make up for lost time and ripen their crop before the weather changed and the rains came. While yields were down about 40% due to frost damage the fruit we did get was of excellent quality and made very elegant wines.

Tasting Notes

A nose of freshly baked bread, lemon curd and minerality open to a bright and round palate, complimented by lemon lime and wet stone flavors.
